

I want to express concern over recent broadcast policy changes on behalf of the FCC that are affecting the nature of radio and television programs available to adult Americans. Some of the new conservative standards imposed on these programs infringe on the freedom of speech and expression of the broadcast and are a blatant contradiction of the fundamentals of the United States. The FCC's imposed censorship negates the citizen's right to choose to listen or view the affected broadcast. Whether or not any individual in this country agrees with the content of many of the programs affected by the new frenetic policies, setting such a precedent of censorship is a breach of American rights. While the FCC is effectively boycotting and penalizing such programs, I wish that I had such liberty to determine whether or not my tax dollars support the actions of this agency. While the halftime show of the super bowl this year was in poor taste, censorship and intolerance on behalf of the federal government is far more insulting to the tax paying American citizen.
